Colonists Sign New Petition

Settlers’ Favorite Weapon Turned This Time to Aid Irwin

BY ARVILLE SCHLAEKEN

The Colonists of Alaska, who have been advocating the establishment of a colony in the Matanuska Valley, have turned to the state capitol in Olympia, Washington, to seek aid for their proposed venture.

The colonists, who have been operating on a shoestring budget, have been unable to secure the necessary funds to continue their mission. They have therefore turned to the state government for assistance.

A petition has been submitted to the governor, requesting financial support for the project. The colonists hope that the state will provide the necessary funds to continue their efforts.

The colonists believe that the establishment of a colony in the Matanuska Valley would be a great asset to the state and to the nation. They hope that the state will take their request seriously and provide the necessary support.

Hair Grows in Alaska; Colonists Hope Crops Will, Too

THE MILWAUKEE JOURNAL

Colonists Sign New Petition

Settlers’ Favorite Weapon Turned This Time to Aid Irwin

BY ARVILLE SCHLAEKEN

The Colonists of Alaska, who have been advocating the establishment of a colony in the Matanuska Valley, have turned to the state capitol in Olympia, Washington, to seek aid for their proposed venture.

The colonists, who have been operating on a shoestring budget, have been unable to secure the necessary funds to continue their mission. They have therefore turned to the state government for assistance.

A petition has been submitted to the governor, requesting financial support for the project. The colonists hope that the state will provide the necessary funds to continue their efforts.

The colonists believe that the establishment of a colony in the Matanuska Valley would be a great asset to the state and to the nation. They hope that the state will take their request seriously and provide the necessary support.

Hair Grows in Alaska; Colonists Hope Crops Will, Too